AN IRRIGATION IDEA.

Major Powell's Plan for Reclaiming Arid Lands.

HOW THEY MANAGE IT IN KANSAS.

What an Agricultural Experiment Station ha Demonstrated Concerning the Cultivation of Arid Lands-House and Senate

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 .- Major Powell, chief of the federal commission to report upon the best method of irrigation for the arid lands of the country, read a paper upon the subject before the chamber of commerce this afternoon. He begun with the state-ment that about half of the lands of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, are arid. These lands, he said, so far as they can be brought under cultivation by irri-gation, are the best lands in the country because the crops are certain, not being subject to the chances of extreme wet and subject to the chances of extreme wet and extreme dry seasons as in the case of lands dependent upon rain. Of 1,000,000,000 acres of arid land in the United States, about six millions are now under calityation by irrigation and about one hundred and awenty millions altogether can be rendered arable by that method. Major Powell estimates that the construction of reservoirs, canalis and other works necessary will cost at the rate of $10 per acre. Assuming that 100,000,000 acres are to be redeemed in this way, the cost will aggregate $1,000,000,000. For the proper carrying out of the work unillions are now under cultivation by irrigation and about one hundred and twenty millions altogether can be rendered arable by that method. Major Powell estimates that the construction of reservoirs, canals and other works necessary will cost at the condition of reservoirs, canals and other works necessary will cost at the condition of the four hundredth may be constructed to the redeemed in this way, the cost will aggregate £1,000,000,000.

For the proport carrying out of the works where irrigation is unnecessary land is cultivated by private initiation, each farmer being able to raise his crop in entire independence of his neighbors. In arid countries to coparation for the distribution of water from its source is essential. In hundred countries the tendency is toward small boldings, while in arid countries it is toward large holdings. Many large and small streams run through the said belt, large holdings. Many large and small streams run through the said belt, large holdings. Many large and small streams run through the said belt, large holdings are to be taken for controlling and protecting the large body of pasture lands not suitable for cultivation. In addition to these there are great tracts of mineral lands which should has been discovered by a single stream parcelled out in quantities only large enough for economical working.

When storage reservoirs and irrigating canals are completed, vast water powers will have been created suitable for mannifacturing purposes. These will calen for irrigation. The government, "Major proved and the preceding out of the mass of the government would be to build up a boreaucray and army of officialism. The only thing the government should be its build as a breasteracy and army of officialism. The only thing the government should be its build as a breasteracy and army of officialism. The only thing the government state in the house the following communities of the fore water a great many thousand men will be necessary and to put the matter in the hands of the territory cricts what portion of them are entitled to use the water?

Major Powell holds they should be used at the points where they will do the most good. "This point," be says, "is where the stream turns from the rushing crystal mountain torrent to the low land stream which mingles with the soil of the land from which it flows. If tuken about that point, it would be where the chilly simosphere of the high allitude would make it jess useful in the production of crops. If taken below that point, the water would be too much evaporated and wasted on the way. Thus tuking the Arkansas river as an example, water enough to irrigate [1,000,000 acres in Colorado would be reduced to only enough to irrigate one or two hundred thousand across the line in Kansas. The same rule." Major Powell says, "applies to the waters in the upper Missouri, Colorado, Rio Grande del Norte and Columbia rivers." He estimates the aggregate value of the water of all these rivers at 5000,000,000.

Major Powell suggests that mosey for carrying out these great schemes might be raised by the issuance of community bonds or other similar methods.

All Very Well for Kansas.

Washington, Dec. 5.-Secretary Rusk has received a report from the agric announcing that it has been demonstrated that the arid lands of the west can be made sorghum, and it is believed that wheat, corn and polatoes will grow equally well. The ground was guiverized to make a hed for holding the water that fails in rain; the planted surface waspowered after sowing of the first crop with matted straw, to keep the loam from blowing away, and with it the seed. Subsequent crops will require no straw, for the reason that the matted roots will keep the day earth from Gang Diara every with high winds.
